Historical and modern species lists and records - First Edition 2009

Introduction to Sherwood Forest Lepidoptera

First edition 2009

This publication is aimed at providing an accurate record of all Sherwood Forest Lepidoptera recorded from the 1800's, the 1900's, post-2000 records and completely up to date with the inclusion of the latest records from 2008 and follows the same format as we have used in the accompanying publication Sherwood Forest Coleoptera - 2009 Edition.

It is by no means a complete list and should not be treated as so, but represents a hopeful start on the way to producing a definitive Sherwood Forest site list, by trying to gather all available Lepidoptera records in one document.

This is the first edition of this project and includes traceable public records and those held privately by local naturalists and our thanks go to those individuals who have provided their records for inclusion. It is hoped that more old records will be provided for inclusion over the coming years, helping to create a more accurate record of the forest's Lepidoptera.

There are two lists produced, including a full site species list which has been compiled from various sources and includes the historical list sourced from J.W. Carr's book "The Invertebrate Fauna of Nottinghamshire" published in 1916, which is also produced separately.

Lepidoptera at Sherwood Forest

Sherwood Forest has produced a large variety of species since the late 1800's and through to the present day. Whilst many species which were recorded historically have long since disappeared, new species have successfully colonised the area. Climatic changes over the past hundred years, have almost certainly led to a considerable change in the range of species found on site.

The historical and modern recording of Lepidoptera at Sherwood Forest has continually produced isolated single records of many species, and whilst any species has the ability to be recorded well away from their favoured habitat, some records will always be considered extremely doubtful by county recorders, organisations or document editors. For instance, Carr in his book found many of Sterland's records to be unacceptable, based largely on the lack of supporting evidence. In all lists produced in this document, we have followed Carr's example and omitted Sterland's records which he considered to be doubtful.

One aspect of recording which has not changed since the 1800's, is the lack of attention given by Lepidopterists to the site's micro lepidoptera. Virtually all micro records sourced from Carr's book were attributed to R.E. Brameld, who must have spent many hours in the field recording. Without his work, then much larger gaps would have appeared in the records. As it is, much work is still required to record the many leaf-mining species which Sherwood Forest undoubtedly holds.

Recent Lepidoptera surveys and recording

A great deal of moth trapping and recording took place at the Visitor Centre during the 1980's and has provided some very useful data, which at some time in the future, will perhaps be used to enable a comparison with more recent records and numbers.

A succession of operators and recorders trapped at the Visitor Centre during the 1980's and a Rothamsted trap was also in continuous operation between 1986 and 1990. Unfortunately, much less information and records have been forthcoming for the 1990's and post 2000.

Sourcing records

Most of the records included in the lists, are thought to have originated from what is now the Sherwood Forest Country Park area, but without accurate grid references or specifically indicated sites for most of the records, we found this could not be guaranteed.

It was our original intention to produce a document which listed records only from the Country Park area, but this idea was soon abandoned by what seemed a greater need for encompassing all of the Sherwood Forest records we had available to us for inclusion. There had been some limited attempts to produce a species list many years ago, but we felt that there was a huge gap to be filled in gathering all available records together and documenting them properly for the first time.

Many of the records were sourced from hand-written lists provided by individuals or the Derbyshire Entomological Society. These were held by staff at the Sherwood Forest Visitor Centre. Many of these lists were extremely vague in their dating, or providing a reference source for these records, leading to some gaps in the main list. Quite often the document was untitled, or had no accompanying note or correspondence to help those reading it.

Other documents which referenced species records to BRC Files, all records were dated from 1961-1969. In these instances (and for this edition) we have treated each as individual records, although this might possibly be incorrect.

All historical records sourced from J.W. Carr's "The Invertebrate Fauna of Nottinghamshire" were listed in the book as Sherwood Forest. It is presumed that many records listed as being Sherwood Forest, originated from the Birklands and Bilhaugh SSSI area and were categorised as Sherwood Forest prior to publication. We have not listed any species which Carr commented as being widespread throughout the county, unless specifically stating a Sherwood Forest record, or any of Sterland's records that Carr considered to be doubtful. It should also be noted that Sterland recorded a large number of species which other recorders failed to find and many of his records could be considered doubtful by today's standards.
